The scottyab/rootbeer project has seen steady development, with work done on 185 unique files. More than 20 contributors have helped move the project forward, each playing a role in its progress. Weekly contributions show a lot of activity between weeks 20 and 50, where many developers worked on improving features and fixing bugs. Developers like ArtsemKurantsou, BlitzedRu, and Scottyab have been especially important, leading efforts across many files and making big contributions.

The graph also shows that some contributors haven't been active lately, with small or single contributions earlier on. This might mean changes in responsibilities or that some developers have stepped away. Still, the project is moving forward steadily, with a few main contributors doing most of the work.

The scatter plot shows how much work has been done, with each dot representing a file worked on in a certain week. Different colors represent different authors, making it easy to see who worked on what. Files numbered between 80 and 120, for example, had a lot of work between weeks 30 and 50, showing that these were a priority during that time.
